MICROSOFT ASSIGNS .Net EVANGELIST TO TOTAL

A .NET Evangelist is a high level status issued to a software developer of the .NET platform by Microsoft. These talented individuals are selected by Microsoft to "evangelize" specific ISV's (Independent Software Vendors) on the latest technologies emerging from Microsoft. Of approximately 8,000 ISV's worldwide, Microsoft assigns evangelist to about 300. Total Computer was recently assigned an MS.NET Evangelist. We are very proud of Microsoft's recognition of Total Enforcement[®]. In turn, Microsoft is very excited about the Homeland Security COTS (Commercial Off The Shelf) solution developed by Total Computer on the .NET platform.

The future of application development, and computing in general, is literally fascinating. The very first day with the Microsoft .NET Evangelist, we previewed Visual Studio 3, the next version of the .NET development platform, running on Windows Vista. The next version of the .NET Framework 3.0 has features unprecedented in any development tool available in the industry today. There will be an entirely new meaning to graphical user interface in the near future. The functionality of drag and drop will be literally redefined. The ability to display and manage photos, video, charts and graphs will be revolutionized. The ability to develop magnificent user interfaces will be incredibly advanced. This will result in even easier to use software.

Being brought into the future by Microsoft brings Total Computer ahead of the competition. Most competitors further entrench themselves in legacy technology. With Microsoft's help, Total Enforcement will remain an industry leading product.
